Pisani asks fast action on UDC bill

Gannett News Service

ALBANY - Sen. Joseph R. Pisani. R-Westchester, said Friday he has asked for quick action on a bill to require the State Urban Development Corp. to follow local zoning Pisani said he has asked the Senate Corporations Committee to take up the bill next week and that committee chairman Sen. Walter Langley, R-Albany, said he would give the request consideration.

Gov. Rockefeller, in his mes sage to the legislature, said he would enter legislation to compensate tax losses of municipalities where UDC projects are located.

But Pisani called the proposal "a crumb to the taxpayers" which did not touch "the real heart of our objections to the ruthelss and arrogant proceedings" of UDC.

He said UDC's "evident decision" to expedite construcject in downtown New Rochelle, "despite municipal and community opposition," is in "flagrant disregard of the welfare and convenience of hie site's present tenants.

Saying that "it is not fair to impugn the female sex with the name of the number one exploiter of women," Dr. Eldridge changed the traditional "Ma Bell" to "Pa Bell." She added, "He's still a male chauvinist pig, but there's hope for him now."

NOW member Dorothy Klimley, a White Plains artist, passed out copies of the $4 bil-lion bill to AT&T employes at noon at the company's Hamil-ton Avenue office.

MAINTAINS the charge is a direct quote from the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission's report on the Bell System. Both New York Telephone and AT&T have prepared Affirmative Action programs to meet govern-ment guidelines, but the federal government has not yet approved them.

Dr. Eldridge said NOW has objected to the Affirmative Action plans because they have not gone far enough to correct the alleged injustices. Westchester NOW is urging its members to ask the Office of Federal Contract Compliance to reject the plans.

Nonetheless, Dr. Eldridge said she considered Friday's meeting at the company's corporate park headquarters worthwhile because it demonstrated the interest of women's organizations in Westchester. Smiling, she said, "We let them know big sister is watching."

CARUSO, who had refused to allow a reporter to sit in on the meeting because it is not "not company policy," could not be reached after the session. However, Robert Pugliese, community relations director for New York Telephone's mid-state area, said, "The meeting was considered productive and enlightening and we are looking forward to future contract with Gonnie Siegel, past chapter president of NOW, who attended the hour-long meeting, said the company employs 4,585 people in Westchester area including 1,98 men and 2,597 women. "We were told that, of 723 in management positions. 427 are male and 296 female, but they count secretaries as management!" Puglisce said he did not have the figures before him, but called these "fairly accurate."

At AT&T Mike Fenton, information supervisor for the Northeast Long Lines Division, admitted there is "room for improvement." You can't fire people to hire others," he said but emphasized that the company is going out of its way to tell applicants about all job opportunities. He said it is also advertising in national magazines, ethnic magazines and on campuses of black and women's colleges as well as in newspapers.

Lashing out at what he called a "misleading news release," Frederick J. Adler said there never should have been a controversy over the contractual agreement. "It makes the police look like they want something extra. All they want is what was written into the contract signed in May, 1972," Adler explained. He said most of the longevity payments to policemen with more than 10 years service were to be paid in January, 1973, according to the con-Adler added that at the time, assistant city manager Robert Dolan had been against this provision but City Manager Seymour Scher had overruled him. When the time came for payment this week, Scher reiterated his approval, Adler recalled, but the next day, he said Dolan reneged. It was then that police took issue at a mini-City Hall demonstration. Shortly thereafter, Adler said, Scher personally resolved it. Under the contract, Yonkers policemen get a cumulative $100 a year for every year over 10. Thus, a 15 year officer would be entitled to five years, or $500. Of this, he would receive $400 in January and the other $100 on the exact date of his fifth anniversary in 1973. Adler quoted the paragraph in the contract this morning: "That the city shall pay longevity in lump sum amounts on the anniversary dates of the members of the PBA at the rates heretofore had of $100 a year with a maximum of $1,000 and each member of the PBA shall be entitled to receive his longevity commencing with the start of his 11th year of service and there shall be credited to his service record any and all veterans credit time that has been purchased by the member and said lump sum payments shall commence as of Jan. 1, 1972, and the first lump sum shall be payable immediately and further on the anniversary dates during 1972 and in January, 1973 as well as anniversary dates in 1973." "We don't want the people to think the police are getting more than they bargained for. This was agreed to by the city and all they wanted was for the agreement to be followed.'
